

MUSICAL LEADERSHIP –

LEARN FROM THE WORLD'S LEADING CONDUCTORS

Welcome to a unique workshop training your leadership skills through a new and different perspective - the world of classical music!

Looking at musicians work from inside offers you a fantastic opportunity to mirror and discover new aspects of your own (work) life. Aspects that often are 'blind spots' in our daily routines.

Plato wrote: "I would teach people music, physics and philosophy; but most importantly music, for the patterns in music and all the arts are the keys to learning."

Professional musicians are highly performing people delivering top results under high pressure with different leaders (conductors) each week.

So how do they work efficiently towards the goal (the concert)?

What motivates them to give their best?

How do musicians communicate while playing?

How is the balance between individual performance and teamwork?

What difference does it make working with and without a conductor?

How do they understand the conductor? What are his tools?

What makes a good/bad conductor when his role is silent?

These and many other questions will be discussed and exemplified by musical examples both through live performed music, video clips and audio material.

And in this way we'll enlighten and mirror both strengths and challenges in your own personal leadership and get ideas of how to develop and unfold your potential.
